Regional leaders to learn from Chicago on Leadership Exchange

DENVER—What makes a good city great? It's a question that 160 local business, civic and elected leaders will look for answers to over the next three days in Chicago for the Denver Metro Chamber Leadership Foundation's 26th annual Leadership Exchange.

The delegation will hear about how Chicago is innovating in areas like workforce development, arts and culture and neighborhood revitalization.

"The power of the Leadership Exchange is that it opens the eyes of our leaders, who come from different sectors and industries, to what other regions are doing and helps us find solutions to the challenges we face," said Leadership Foundation Executive Director Dan Lewis. "Each trip reminds us that no issue is tackled alone, and sometimes we can look to others outside our community to find answers."

Leadership Exchange has taken Denver area leaders across North America—from Seattle and Miami to Mexico City and Toronto—to learn how other cities thrive. Click here to watch what 25 years of Leadership Exchange has meant for the Denver metro area.
